Treatment budget and deposit planner

- Separate treatment price from reservation deposit.
- Ask which add-ons are optional and which are expected.
- Keep KRW as the source amount even when viewing converted prices.
- Plan card limits before the clinic visit.
- Leave a contingency buffer for medication or follow-up.
- Store cancellation and refund rules before checkout.

1. Start with the source price

Use the clinic's original currency as the source of truth. Converted prices help planning, but payment and refund records should stay tied to the clinic's original amount.

2. Separate deposit from total cost

The deposit usually holds the appointment. It may be deducted from the final invoice, but the remaining balance should be checked before payment.

3. Plan optional add-ons

Visitors often add skin boosters, imaging, anesthesia, medication or aftercare. Treat optional items as a separate budget line.

4. Keep refund expectations written

Cancellation windows, no-show rules and card refund timing should be saved before checkout.
